STORY OF THE PLAY

Students in Mrs. Smith's class have forgotten, or never knew, the true meaning of Christmas. From Santa to expensive presents to boyfriends, their explanations of what Christmas means to them are generally selfish and shallow.

But that quickly changes when their bus breaks down during a snowstorm and they find themselves seeking shelter in an abandoned church. A homeless man suddenly enters. At first cautious, they soon give him their food, warm coats, shoes and other belongings to comfort him. When he reappears as an angel, he shows them that their generosity is the real meaning of Christmas. The next day they write new essays, this time reflecting their new outlook as Christians.

ACT I

(AT RISE: A high school English classroom. The STUDENTS are seated in their desks, and the teacher has not yet arrived. Andrea is reading her Bible quietly. Ben is typing on a laptop computer. Stephanie, Jessica, Sheena and Kirrissa are talking and laughing. Sheena is touching up her make-up in a compact mirror. Jared and Allison are sitting beside each other, holding hands, and gazing into each other's eyes. Amber is sitting beside Allison, but she is busy listening to headphones. David is hurriedly writing his essay.)

ALLISON: (To JARED.) I can't wait for Christmas. I just know you'll love what I got for you.

JARED: I think you'll like your present too.

ALLISON: If it's from you, I know I'll love it anyway.

DAVID: (To JARED.) Are you ready for the game?

JARED: Yeah, man. Are you?

DAVID: Yeah. My dad's supposed to be home from Chicago in time.

JARED: (Looks at DAVID'S paper.) Are you working on your essay?

DAVID: Yeah. Kind of last minute, huh?

JARED: Really! I finished mine in study hall!

(THEY laugh.)

ALLISON: What are you listening to, Amber?

AMBER: (Name of favorite band.) Who else would it be?

KIRRISSA: (To STEPHANIE and JESSICA.) So, anyway, Kelly said she saw them at the mall. They were kissing!

JESSICA: No way! Right in front of everybody!

KIRRISSA: Yeah! And Jimmy doesn't even know about it yet.

STEPHANIE: He doesn't?

KIRRISSA: Not yet anyway. He's bound to find out soon.

STEPHANIE: (Looks at ANDREA.) Can you believe that girl? She is actually reading that thing in front of everybody.

JESSICA: How embarrassing! I would die before I read a Bible in public.

SHEENA: Really! (To ANDREA.) Hey Andrea, what you reading there?

ANDREA: Matthew, Chapter 2.

SHEENA: What is that?

ANDREA: It's the real Christmas story.

KIRRISSA: Santa Claus is in the Bible?

ANDREA: No. It's about Jesus.

JESSICA: That's right. Didn't Jesus die on Christmas or something?

ANDREA: No. He was born on Christmas.

(ANDREA shrugs. MRS. SMITH enters but does not say anything.)

STEPHANIE: Get a life, Andrea. Nobody reads the Bible anymore.

ANDREA: I do.

STEPHANIE: Well, like I said, nobody reads the Bible anymore.

MRS. SMITH: All right, guys. Sorry I'm late. It's essay day. I assume you have all finished your essays on, "What Christmas Means to Me."

(DAVID tries to hide that he is working on his essay. MRS. SMITH walks to the front of the room and stands in front of her desk.)

MRS. SMITH: (Continued.) Remember, at least one hundred words. You need to read your essay aloud, and then you have to turn it in. Any volunteers?

JESSICA: (Raises hand enthusiastically.) Me! I'll go first.

MRS. SMITH: Jessica, go ahead. (Sits behind her desk.)

JESSICA: (Walks to the front of the classroom, flips her hair, then smiles widely.) The best thing about Christmas to me is knowing that in a few years, I'll be in California. I figure as soon as I graduate, I can go to Hollywood.
